

SUMMARY DESCRIPTION OF OTHER SCIENTOLOGY ORGANIZATIONS

CST (Church of Spiritual Technology) -- is an autonomous church of the Scientology religion outside of the international Scientology ecclesiastical hierarchy. CST conducts an extensive program of activities to preserve and archive the Scientology Scriptures for use by future generations. CST also owns the option to acquire RTC's rights to the Scientology advance technology and religious marks under three narrowly defined sets of circumstances, each of which contemplates a serious threat to continued existence of the religion. CST is the principal beneficiary of Mr. Hubbard's estate, provided that it obtains recognition of its tax-exempt status. The issue of CST's exemption is presently the subject of a declaratory judgment proceeding under section 7428 before the United States Claims Court (No. 581-88T). CST also has a wholly-owned title holding company, Mile High Inc., whose sole purpose is to own CST's main preservation facilities. Another CST subsidiary, Media Storage, Inc., was established to transport the Scriptures securely and confidentially in times of natural disaster. It is dormant and will be dissolved shortly.

Author's Family Trust -- is a trust established by Mr. Hubbard as the principal vehicle for distribution of his estate. Following the termination of his probate estate, the Trust now holds title to all of Mr. Hubbard's copyrights to the Scientology Scriptural Materials and all of his patents to E-Meters. It will continue in existence until CST's tax-exempt status is finally resolved and then distribute the balance of Mr. Hubbard's assets to CST, if CST is recognized as exempt, or otherwise to another Scientology entity recognized as exempt under section 501(c)(3). In order to continue using Mr. Hubbard's name in the copyright notices (copyright notices of posthumous works must be in the name of the decedent's executor or personal representative), the trustees of the Trust registered and use the name L. Ron Hubbard Library as a legal form of operation. The Trust owns all of the shares of Galaxy Productions, Inc., a for-profit corporation created to produce and distribute soundtracks and film scripts of certain of Mr. Hubbard's later fictional works. Galaxy has never paid a dividend.

ASI (Author Services, Inc.) -- served as Mr. Hubbard's literary and financial agent during his lifetime and now continues to serve in largely the same capacity for Mr. Hubbard's Trust. ASI helps the Trust manage Trust funds and supervise use of its literary properties. ASI also works closely with BPI and NEP with respect to Mr. Hubbard's fictional works and related artwork, film and soundtracks. Although nominally a for-profit corporation, ASI in fact functions as a non-proprietary corporation. All of ASI's outstanding shares of stock are held by three of its employees pursuant to an agreement that requires them to transfer the stock back to ASI on termination of their employment for $1.00 (as legal consideration). ASI has never paid a dividend.
